And each StoreCategory is attached to a model StoreCategoryModel. In my index() function in my controller i want to get and count all StoreCategories and their Models. \$data = ['storecategories' => \$this->storecategories->count()]; But this throws an error because its expecting an array and gets an object. I did manage to get the Category count: \$data = ['storecategories' => StoreCategory::where('store_id', \$id)->count()]; So by default its ignoring the StoreCategory model and I'm not sure how to add it to that example so my question is: How to get the count of StoreCategoryModels associated with all StoreCategories associated with a Store? A: You can do something like this: \$data = ['storecategories' => StoreCategory::with('store_category_models')->where('store_id', \$id)->count()]; A: \$data = ['storecategories' => StoreCategory::where('store_id', \$id)->where('store_category_model_id',null)->count()]; worked for me. $m_{\{1\}}$ term of Eq. ($\neq m1$) is always small, assuming that $\Delta m_{\{osc\}}$ is of order the Hubble time. However,
