It does not have any virtual "layers" to select and manipulate parts of an image. Photoshop Elements has a single, flat workspace. It has a single undo command, which appears on the top right of the screen, but nothing else to indicate that there are multiple undo commands. Many experts on graphics editing recommend not using Photoshop Elements for serious work but instead to use Photoshop for custom graphics, web design, or both. Since Photoshop is the world's leader in the field of graphics editing, its features and user interface have quickly become ubiquitous. Photoshop is the de facto standard for editing graphics. Photoshop means that your clients, employers, publishers or whoever you work for will automatically assume that you know Photoshop. However, since Photoshop is so advanced, it is not always the ideal tool for every task. Many people have found themselves with graphic design jobs where they do not use Photoshop. Photoshop Elements is an alternative for them. For other expert users, Photoshop Elements is superior in some ways, although not necessarily in all ways. Why would you use Photoshop Elements instead of the professional version of Photoshop? Why use Photoshop Elements? If you are a: Photographer – To edit images from your digital camera. NextStop Blog Search form Ride Lanes If you're looking for a clear, predictable route on the roads in your neighborhood, you might consider signing up for a new "Ride Lanes" program. Before you do, however, know that you're not going to receive any special benefits. In reality, these are just like any other free service - you probably can't even get them on your own. But these new programs are especially good for drivers, thanks to GPS and other technological advances. They allow users to get directions to their destination via a road with a different colored lane or line than the typical red or yellow. Usually, if you are unfamiliar with an area, these are a good way to get around. Applying for one will require a few things. First, you'll need to get a smartphone app that can communicate with the lane system. Second, you will need to provide proof of insurance or liability insurance on your car and you must provide a specific license plate number. If your car or license plate number was involved in a crash, this can help prevent insurance companies from "tacking on" your cost for accidents. Finally, you'll need to provide proof that you drive often. In many cases, your insurance company will already have you registered in the program. Others, like the City of Saint Louis, don't require this, but it makes sense for those who travel often to save the cost of an annual fee. Ultimately, the program will be rolled out at the end of 2014. The application process will take about 30-60 minutes to complete. Email your entry to contact@nextstop.com with a minimum of 200 words explaining why you're interested in entering the program.- name: Installing Ruby apt: pkg=ruby-{{ ruby_version }} when: ruby_version is defined tags: - install_ruby - name: Installing RubyGems apt: pkg=rubygems-{{ ruby_version }} when: ruby_version is defined tags: - install_rubygems - name: Installing Postgresql apt: pkg=postgresql-{{ postgresql_version }} when: postgresql_version is

What's New In Adobe Photoshop CC 2015?

Q: Javascript string after ":" is not acting as a selector I have a button (not dynamically added) with id="main-button". I have an input tag which is initially empty. When the user clicks on the button I want to append an input to the current selection. The problem is that when the user clicks on the button the `document.getElementById("main-button")` selects the button rather than the empty input element. The css is `#main-button { display:block; text-align:center; text-decoration:none; }` I have tried the following but that doesn't work: `document.getElementById("main-button").onclick = function() { if (document.createElement("input").select) { this.id = "main-button:" + document.getElementById("my-input").value document.getElementById("main-button") } } }` I'm new to JS and that's why I'm struggling with this. UPDATE: In its actual form this code is placed in a jsp file. I don't have the ability to manipulate the jsp from the webpage I already added `onClickListener` to the Button element. Add UPDATE 2: The actual solution was `var input = document.getElementById("my-input"); var newInput = input.cloneNode(false); newInput.id = "main-button:" + input.value; input.parentNode.replaceChild(newInput, input);` Thanks to @Eevee for the help A: `document.getElementById("main-button")` selects the button because that's where the id attribute is. Unless you're adding more than one element with this id attribute, you shouldn't be using `getElementById` on that element since it should already exist. Instead, use `document.querySelector` or `document.querySelectorAll` and then loop through them to get the one you're looking for. `document`
