Sometimes it's best to use software that's designed specifically for the job, and Photoshop is no exception. If you can't find a program designed specifically to do what you need it to do, you can go looking for an image-editing program that does the job, but you might not be able to find one (at least not one that's as easy to use and doesn't have a list price you can't afford). In this chapter, we offer some suggestions about using Photoshop's features to help you achieve the best look for your photographs, whether you're a beginner or an experienced user. We even suggest some resources for finding free (or very low-cost) tutorials that help you improve your skills.

The strength of Photoshop Elements lies in the speed and ease of use. It allows beginners to quickly edit images and share them online. Pros can edit their images in more detail and effectively work with vectors. I personally prefer Photoshop Elements to Photoshop because I don't have the time to learn the complex features of Photoshop. Photoshop Elements is simple, easy to use and effective. I will show you how to edit a simple image in Photoshop Elements. The picture is of a vase. I have blackened the vase so that it looks like a black-and-white photograph. I will edit the white part of the vase to have a slightly matte appearance. First of all, we need to load the picture into Photoshop Elements. Press the Open button and choose the vase. Now, we will change the color of the black part to have a matte appearance. In the Layers palette, open the Layer. Press CTRL+T to create a new layer. Add a new layer by pressing the Add Layer button. Press CTRL+L on the keyboard to select the Brush tool. Click on the hard black part of the vase to select it, then press CTRL+T again to create a new layer. In the Adjustments palette, open the Curves or Curves Layers panel. Click in the white area in the image. A curve should appear on the Layers palette. To change the curve's appearance, click to select the curve. Click the close-up button and hold down the mouse button to zoom in on a smaller area of the curve. Now, check the Loosen box in the Adjustments palette. This will make the curve easier to handle and will prevent the curve from stretching too much when used to edit the image. Now that the curve is selected, move it to the bottom right by dragging in the image. This should flatten out the part of the curve that is curved towards the right. Press SHIFT+E to invert the layer. This will flip the curve over so that it's now curved towards the top right. Select the curve and press CTRL+T to create a new layer. This time, go back to the Adjustments palette and click the Add button to bring up the Color Variations palette. Check the Matte box in the Color Variations palette. a681f4349e

Kimberly and Brandon Kimberly and Brandon are fictional characters who appear in the American television series Ellen and portrayed by actresses Christine Lakin and Garrett Morris. Overview The on-screen couple is the parents of Paige (Jewel Staite) and Max (Michael Cassidy). Kim (Lakin) has divorced from her husband Brandon, and tries to stay connected with her daughter and son. Kim is a single mother who works at a call center. Brandon works in a men's-wear store. Ellen despises them; her mother feels that they have nothing to offer her at all and has very little to do with them, as seen when she pretends to be dead before Max's wedding to Laura (Kelli Barrett). Kimberly and Brandon appeared in the early episodes of the series, up until season six (2002), when the show was reformatted and renamed Ellen DeGeneres Show. They were characters from Ellen's second show Ellen and have since made sporadic appearances on the Ellen DeGeneres Show. Departure It was announced on January 21, 2002, that Kimberly and Brandon would no longer be a part of the show, with the reason given being that the producers wanted to start changing the show from a sitcom to a variety show. Despite this, they made a few brief appearances in the next couple of episodes. The couple did not appear on the show from that point onward until the program was reformatted as The Ellen DeGeneres Show in 2005. Herman Boone was a star at linebacker for the University of Virginia before a full-time career in broadcasting. So, when a fan at Michigan basketball's Joe Louis Arena asked Boone for his opinion on the Golden State Warriors' postseason matchups against the Oklahoma City Thunder, it was an easy sell. Boone, a Michigan grad, uses his platform at Michigan State to encourage good basketball while giving his opinions on the sport, even if it's on the national level. Boone used his current platform, as a Golden State Warriors fan, to deliver his opinion on the Thunder's game against the Warriors, giving it a perfect score for his fans.
