To determine whether dogs with inflammatory bowel disease (IBD) have elevated serum levels of the trace elements copper (Cu) and zinc (Zn). To determine the concentrations of Cu and Zn in the IBD dogs in comparison with serum levels of Cu and Zn in age- and sex-matched healthy dogs. Cross-sectional study. Serum levels of Cu and Zn were determined in dogs with IBD (n = 18) and healthy dogs (control group, n = 18). Results were compared with those for healthy dogs. Serum Cu and Zn concentrations were measured using inductively coupled plasma mass spectrometry. The mean concentration of serum Cu in the dogs with IBD (32.0 ± 17.4 mg/L) was significantly higher than that in the control dogs (22.1 ± 9.7 mg/L). The mean concentration of serum Zn in the dogs with IBD (44.3 ± 22.7 mg/L) was significantly higher than that in the control dogs (35.0 ± 17.1 mg/L). The mean serum Cu:Zn molar ratio was 0.44 ± 0.19 in the dogs with IBD, which was significantly higher than that in the control dogs (0.33 ± 0.12). Serum Cu and Zn concentrations were significantly elevated in dogs with IBD. This suggests that excessive amounts of Cu and Zn may play a role in the pathogenesis of IBD in dogs.Terms of Use EASI SHARE CONCEPT ("EASI") WEBSITE TERMS LINKED WEBSITES EASI SHARE CONCEPT is a trademark, service mark, and trade dress owned by Echo Innovation Ltd ("Echo").
