Palladium and platinum Tandem Catalysts with Selective Alkyl Radical Trapping for the Hydrosilylation of Alkynes and Alkenes. A dual-function catalyst system composed of the combination of a palladium complex and a palladium-ruthenium tandem catalyst was developed for the hydrosilylation of alkynes and alkenes. The first palladium catalyst selectively traps the alkyl radical to protect alkenes, while the second palladium-ruthenium tandem catalyst selectively promotes silyl radical addition to alkynes. The system exhibited high catalytic activity, selectivity, and good functional group compatibility. Additionally, dual-function catalysis of the tandem catalyst system using different metal loadings shows that the second metal has a positive influence on the catalytic activity.
