What's New in the Keep Me Informed?

Keep me informed is an application which tells you if your internet connection is working or not, by changing its system tray icon color (red - the internet connection is not working and green - the internet connection is working). Keep me informed is very useful if you have problems with your ISP or Internet connection. Features: The application displays real time notifications of your connection status. If your internet connection is working, then the system tray icon is displayed in green color and if the internet connection is not working then the icon is displayed in red color. The application runs and executes in the system tray. The icon shows the connection status. The application has a scheduled refresh interval and also can be refreshed manually by clicking on the icon. The application can be configured to update itself when a network cable is connected to the PC, or when a network cable is disconnected from the PC. The application can also check your connection status even when your PC is not in connected to the internet. The application is always connected and if your connection is lost for a particular time, then the application will inform you that the connection is lost and if you are lucky, then your Internet provider will try to restore the connection. History Created by Techgnosis (www.techgnosis.com) on August 28, 2008. The idea was born from a suggestion by its creator to create a utility which would help users who have trouble with their connection or ISP and also it is more useful when the system tray icon changes color indicating the internet connection status.
