We report a high refractive index open-ended microcavity composed of high refractive index Si and a single-chamber cell, which is fabricated at wafer scale and can be utilized as a near-infrared microcavity laser or a highly reflective cavity for single-photon counting. The 1.3 μm microcavity exhibits high refractive index of 1.903, which is determined to be the highest reported value among Si microcavities, and an optical quality factor ($Q(\text{opt})$) of 1.5×10^5 , which is the highest reported among Si microcavities. The simple fabrication process and material system of high refractive index Si have the potential for future integrations with other electrical, optical, or magnetic elements. 446 So.2d 1145 (1984) Alvin McGILLIS, Jr. v.
