OK, the broken link is also solved. Thank you very much v 1.1 f 12.5.04 HeapSize was set too small. Memory management is no longer disabled. RC4 engine. It may be used as part of an RC5 engine. Support for omitting the /trunk/ subfolder from the build path. the OCX file name, which is used when the package is installed on an NT 4.0 system. The default value of the Network Discovery feature has been reduced. Previously, it was set to the full range of well-known IP addresses. Note that it has not changed the port address it was bound to. If a port mapping feature is configured, the client must be restarted for the port mapping to take effect. If you have configured a port mapping feature, the list of mapped ports is now displayed when the Windows Firewall dialog is opened. Note that the list of ports does not include comma-separated values that are copied from the package's export properties file. For example, if you have a comma-separated value of 80,25,51,25,81,210,32 and you select port 25 from the Windows Firewall dialog, the value will be changed to 80,25,51,25,81,210,32. In other words, the list of ports is not consulted when the mapping is made. The ReturnAddress feature has been turned off by default. If you add packages that use this feature, they must be registered as system packages for it to be enabled. (Note that the ReturnAddress feature is not used for incoming connections.) The ReturnAddress feature is no longer the default, although you may still set it when installing packages. If you add packages that use this feature, they must be registered as system packages
