Reason Software Dec 11, 2020 Six months ago, I installed this in my other machine, hoping that it would allow me to use an external CD drive in my new laptop. In the meantime, the external CD drive has been built into my laptop. I've looked in the Help file, the web, and even the integrated audio menu and see no mention of an external CD drive. When I do use the computer with the internal CD drive, the Reason software asks to use an installed 'USB drive' to store its files. I tried an external USB drive, but Reason says it is 'unrecognized', and then suggests the internal USB drive. I've also tried connecting it directly to the A/V out port on the rear of the laptop. Dec 11, 2020 So, as a temporary measure, I've removed Reason from this laptop, connected a standard CD drive to it, and run the Reason software from that CD, instead of running it from my laptop. I have Reason 6.5.3, and it seems to recognize and load the external CD drive. I can browse through the files and folders. However, I cannot open any Reason instruments or utilities. I cannot load a new Reason project file. Reason says that 'USB drive' I've connected is 'unrecognized'. I've tried connecting the CD drive to my primary laptop, and to the secondary laptop I use for internet. Reason's automated 'ignore collection browser' button could do with some love: Pianomusic. com, Best Reason 12 & Record software - Creating your own. I don't own it. Problem is, when I display the table without any rows, the control for each column renders with rows in the header. I want to have a DataTable with two columns, but without a row (i.e. just blank), how can I do this? Here is the code I have so far: `$(document).ready(function () { $("#dataTable").kendoGrid({ //... sortable: true, pageable: true, scrollable: true, resizable: true, editable: true, formatters: [{ type: 'text', ignore: ["id"] }, { type: 'date', 55cdc1ed1c`
