PVA-xanthan was used as standard material. According to test results, the Cu-PVA-xanthan coating on the surface of the WGP was effectively reduced the copper leaching. The maximum copper removal efficiency of PVA-xanthan was 15.52% with the same PVA content and xanthan content. PVA as an effective reinforcement can effectively inhibit copper leaching. The addition of xanthan with a large amount of hydroxyl groups can effectively improve the metal retentive ability of the composite material. A Pod can use a Persistent Volume (PV) or a Persistent Volume Claim (PVC) to create a volume. A PV can be dynamically provisioned or dynamically attached, depending on the needs of a Pod. A PVC represents an abstraction that Pods can use to reference a volume. A PVC is like a label on a volume, but the volume can belong to a resource that has other specification, such as the capacity. A PVC requires the specification of a storage class, so a user needs to create a PVC first before they can use the volume. A PVC can be attached to or hosted by a PV or another PVC. Specification
