Q: How to find the name of the specific value in the input? How to find the name of the specific value in the input? How to check the name of the specific value from the input in the same code? A: You can use a regex in conjunction with the $1 variable which you refer to a captured group of the regular expression. var str = "; var match = str.match(/); if (match) { alert(match[1]); } Or you can replace the name attribute with a class so you can select it with jQuery('yourclass') You can test it here and here Sunday, October 5, 2014 Teaser and Day 5 - Things I Will Change in My Life Day 5 - Things I Will Change in My Life 1. Love 2. Money 3. Media 4. Love Money Media 5. My Childhood 1. Love I have always loved so I'm going to change this. I want to give back. Not giving money to make money but giving it away to people who need it. I can't really change the money but I can start giving it away. 2. Money I would go to a different school. I would also do that instead of doing my MBA. I love the school I go to now but I wouldn't be able to afford it. I would use my savings and go to a school I could afford. 3. Media I would go and tell people that media has influence but it doesn't. I would go around and tell people that people don't really change how they live because of TV. I would also say that people don't really make decisions because of movies and TV. 4. Love Money Media I would advertise that there is no such thing as wealth. I would tell people that we all make money and we all use money to live. If I was rich, I wouldn't share my

NEW DELHI: The Centre, in the light of multiple reports of illegal arms being brought in by immigrants and tribals from across the country, has strengthened its investigation into the issue by launching a special probe committee. The Centre has decided to establish an "Office of the Special Investigation Team for Importation, Transport and Trafficking of Un sourced Counterfeit, Pirated and Stolen Commercial Replicas of Objects and Weapons" (STI-CTO) in Delhi to probe cases of violation of the arms act. The committee, comprising two representatives from central vigilance and anti-corruption and anti-money laundering (CVC/CAG) departments and one from the Intelligence Bureau, will look into details of the raid on an arms smuggling syndicate. An official who participated in the meeting of the Cabinet Committee on Security (CCS) on Monday, told ET that the move is in light of several reports of illegal arms being brought in by immigrants and tribals, as well as militants. Sources said that such a team has been constituted before, but never had the power to prosecute. The panel will be headed by Additional Director General of the CVC (Central Vigilance Commission), who is the in-charge of anti-corruption and anti-money laundering (CAG) department, and an IB officer. The second members will be the CAG in-charge of the CVC and the IB chief. They will be assisted by senior officials from the CVC/CAG and IB, and will submit their report to the government within five days. The team, currently at its inception stage, will be "instrumental in strengthening the immediate investigation in cases", the official added. Till now the investigation process has been "completely under the investigating officer," but the government is looking at empowering the panel with specific powers to ensure that "the guilty are brought to justice," the official said. As per the existing framework, any suspicious activity against arms can only be taken up by the CVC, which then asks for an investigation by the CBDT (Central Bureau of Investigation) which then documents it as case. In the CBI, investigations are entrusted to the CBI DIG-headed independent directorate and the non-IPS officers under him. Similarly, the Delhi police has the power to take up the investigation of suspicious arms cases at the behest of the CVC but has no jurisprudence to prosecute. In the recent months,
