The concept of the American flag is based on the ensign of the . [4] Different styles of American flags can be found throughout the country. [3]The purpose of the proposed research is to assess the influence of three classes of factors on the incidence and progression of cancer: (1) nutrition, specifically dietary fat, fiber, and protein; (2) hormones, specifically growth factors (epidermal growth factor (EGF), insulin, and triiodothyronine); and (3) the tumor microenvironment, specifically lymphocytes, macrophages, and other immunologic parameters. These factors have been hypothesized to influence the incidence and progression of various forms of cancer, including breast cancer. These influences can be assessed by measuring the hormone levels, or gene expression profiles, or nutritional parameters of the breast and breast tumor in vivo and by culturing, and characterizing in vitro, the cells or tissues involved in tumor formation. The proposed research will investigate the role of dietary fats in the etiology of human breast cancer. Three principal avenues will be pursued: (1) A comparative analysis of the effects of dietary fat sources on the growth of the breast epithelial cells of transgenic mouse models which carry both the ras oncogene and a mutation in one of the tumor suppressor genes, p53. (2) We will extend this work by investigating the effects of dietary fat on breast cancer progression in the transgenic mouse model. (3) We will investigate the effects of dietary fat on both the development and progression of the breast cancer in preneoplastic tissue and in the postneoplastic breast tissue of rats treated with chemical carcinogens. The proposed studies will investigate the effects of dietary fat on cancer growth in a variety of contexts. We will determine the role of dietary fat on the development of both estrogen-dependent and estrogen-independent tumors. We will also determine the potential role of dietary fat in the progression of a tumor once it has developed. In each case, we will determine if dietary fat influences any processes specific to the breast, including the development
