----- Protein with the highest expression at the transition between the C and A stages corresponds to the TaALA1-DUF767-like-1 (TA1-DUF7667). This class of proteins, which is almost exclusively expressed in the germinating endosperm (Shao et al. [@CR54]), are localized in the perinuclear region of the endosperm cell in the context of endosperm development. During development, TaALA1-DUF767-like-1 is not translated in the vegetative tissues. It is important to note that the two TaALA1-DUF767-like-1 isoforms show a difference in their transcript levels but not in their protein levels. The comparison of sequences of TaALA1-DUF767-like-1 isoforms revealed that the two proteins share 100 % identity. The sole difference in their protein sequences is the presence of a DUF7667 domain. This domain is found in a protein that was identified as potential photoreceptor in the tomato. Despite the significant difference in their protein sequences, which could not have been detected by the MS analysis, these two proteins
