Email Password Dump is designed to perform a password recovery on different email clients, using the auto-detection method, which means that the software will scan your PC and will reveal the addresses of all those services containing a confidential type of credentials. Just run the free trial version of the software, so that you can experience the way it works. You will get a full idea of what is happening in the background and how it works in order to retrieve your passwords. You can read the step-by-step instruction by pressing the Help button in the toolbar. Also, you will be able to have a look at the configuration settings. Email Password Dump runs without any installation, but you can check the list of the programs that it enables you to add to the file you are prompted to include. For instance, you can add wordlist files, which should be named as "email_password_dumper_.dumperwordlist", for instance "email_password_dumper_windows_messenger.dumperwordlist". Note: the file extension doesn't have anything to do with the program which the data is from. You can add different files with various extension, with each of the file containing a list of credentials, which you are getting from the different installed programs. You can run the program in a silent mode, which allows you to save your time during installation as you won't be asked to enter in your email credentials. The program is completely free to use, as you can run it in a free trial mode before deciding to download.

Clinical characteristics of mucin-producing tumors: A longitudinal study of 12 Korean patients. Mucin-producing tumors (MPTs) are rarely encountered in the upper aerodigestive tract. We describe the clinicopathological characteristics and management of 12 patients with MPTs. We retrospectively reviewed the medical records of patients with MPTs diagnosed from 1999 to 2016 at the Yonsei Cancer Center. Twelve patients (8 men and 4 women; mean age, 60.8 years) with MPTs were included. The most common primary site was the paranasal sinus (11 of 12; 92.8%). Two of the patients presented with hemoptysis, and five patients were asymptomatic. The most common histopathological finding was metastatic adenocarcinoma (11 of 12; 91.7%). The most common treatment
