The goal of each puzzle is to drop celestial cue balls into the black hole pockets on the star map. Your cue stick controls the movement of the cue ball. Simply tap the ball or your cue ball with your first finger and drag your finger across the screen to move the cue ball. Tap any star when you’re close enough to drop your ball into it. If you run into a wall, you’re out of luck and the game ends. Gameplay Tips: Cue balls are affected by the gravitons that orbit the black holes. In order to get the cue balls to drop into the black holes, you have to use gravity. If you’re not sure what gravitons are, they’re the tiny particles that make up most of our universe. Gravitons act as a massless particle, which means that they don’t have any mass and any amount of them can be added to or subtracted from the ball. Gravitons are created every time you fire a shot, and they travel along the outside of the edge of the table. At each black hole, gravitons that are traveling towards the center of the black hole drop into the black hole, while those traveling away from the center are not affected. Theoretically, it is possible to deflect gravitons with your cue ball, if you get really good at shooting, but that would require incredible accuracy. Features: Think you can take on the galaxy? The game has 5 chapters: About Us, Chapter 1: The Usurpers, Chapter 2: The Revolution Begins, Chapter 3: The New Land of Libertonia, Chapter 4: Unforeseen Consequences, Chapter 5: The Trial of Trajan! The game has a total of 6 endings! There are 4 ending that happens as the game progresses along with the ending that you will get if you manage to get all the other endings. You will need a minimum of: 8GB Hard Drive, 4GB Video Memory, At least 500 MB Ram, Windows 10 / 8 / 7 / Vista or Windows XP Storyline: While the game begins with you joining the famous uprising group known as "The Usurpers", you soon learn that the world you live in is an illusion. The world is not the world, but a virtual program created by a program called "Monsieur Sing", it has been designed to look like the world, but in reality it is a program that his real program is running on top of. You join a group of rebels known as "The Usurpers" who have been designed to be part of a digital uprising against the program "Monsieur Sing". Monsieur Sing is trying to take over the world, and so he has created a program that will fake the world to make people believe that the world is great and that it is the greatest. He has created the world to make people forget his real program known as "Monsieur Sing" that has been in the world for generations now. The rebels of the Usurpers are trying to take over the world, but they are doing this in a way that it doesn't look like an uprising. They want to make sure the world will look like a normal world that is great, but instead it turns out that it is not a normal world and that what really is happening is that Monsieur Sing has been corrupting the world. And so the rebels of the Usurpers have created a secret group called "The Dark Ones" who are going to overthrow Monsieur Sing and destroy his program and that will end the world of fake. But there's a problem, Monsieur Sing has two sons who are very close to him. He believes that one of the two sons will rule after him and that it will be the son who is more like him. He has taught them that one is good and the other is evil. The good son is named "Trajan

Conclusion Overall: Fantastic value for money, a solid and engaging story for anyone who delves into other universes, and the art by Mark Gruenwald and the page designs by Paul Ryan are fantastic! The only potential downside to it could be that the numbers are quite a bit smaller than expected: just two issues per story arc, and only three one-shot issues in total for the entire series. That said, it looks like it will be big enough to allow a decent amount of stories focused on different elements in Konkylia, and as mentioned previously, they are working to make the one-shots into a monthly series. Hold off on reading the second arc until after the next one-shot, because that particular one-shot is a rather major one. Letting the story stand on its own is a good idea, but if you haven't already read it, you will need to be on-board with the events of the previous arc. For some reason I've always questioned the sanity of going into detail about all of this, and I only did so for the sake of honesty. Thank you for the long 'nice' comment. Don't worry, here's the 'not-long' comment. Yes, we understand that there are more to the worlds we create. What The Great World Saga (FTGWS) does is to create new worlds, hopefully in an entertaining way, and identify a possible existence of larger consequence. This review would be better put as a letter to Todd Farmer. That with-holding the letter - and making a comment that it's not any good - be viewed as a positive. That's just my outlook. Poor reviews are viewed as better than no reviews. I am not by any stretch of the imagination saying that The Great World Saga is no good. It seems like Mr. Farmer likes a good bit of chit-chat here and there, and it's become a real gripe. It's less of a gripe than a genuine concern. The People's Mind Stargazer: The PnA's World #4 Story: This is the fourth issue of The People's Mind Stargazer, which begins a two-part story arc. Wow, that was a long wait! The plot was pretty sweet, so I understand all the waiting was worth it. A surprise twist with a really cool ending, now I'm really interested to read the next issue to find

K.O. KOALA ENTERTAINMENT™ is an independent development studio. The Challenge Invaders have traveled to Agora. Players must get to work and escape. The Adventure “The plot is pretty straightforward. They’ve come to take the Athena twins away from their parents and put them with AI to be taught their ways. They’ve even zapped your avatar to make sure you understand the situation,” says K.O. Koala Entertainment’s Founder and Creative Director, Alan Wong. “The game is a physics based puzzle platformer. In the beginning it will be straightforward, but later on it will become more and more challenging as the plot continues to unfold.” Gameplay Agora is a puzzle platformer where players control a trained agent. In the game, players use 3D physics to manipulate the environment around them. The game features over 200 unique missions, 20+ levels, and an arsenal of weaponry. Marketing The name “Agora” comes from “Agora”, an ancient word for a marketplace. The game was originally meant to be set in an urban environment (cityscape) just like GTA. But when the technology used in the real estate simulation (SitePower) proved too expensive for the project, K.O. Koala Entertainment agreed to use a more cost effective location (the Parthenon). The game was funded on Kickstarter from October 2010 to February 2011.
