Bringing up My Boys to be Good Men Menu Defining Moments for My Son's Life... Today we sat down and had a talk about the definition of Fatherhood. For me this is a conversation we should always be having, and it's something I'm focusing on as I move forward as a Dad. What is a good Dad? So the first question was, What is a good Dad? Well, I really wish I was able to answer that. I personally don't think there is one right answer, however, I do think that a good Dad is one who is there for them, and loves them. Who provides them what they need and that is the most important thing. One of my first memories of my Dad is of him providing me with food. It's funny because the first thing I recall him doing that I remember was to get a square of cheese, which he then wrapped up and tucked in my lunch-box. My parents used to work long hours, so this was one way my Dad was able to show me how much he cared about me. My Dad wasn't a great cook, which I'm sure is one of the reasons I'm not able to do it, however, he would cook when he was around and then pack it up and give it to me when he wasn't. He did that with everything. He bought me clothes, he gave me a birthday present, he bought my siblings presents, and he purchased tickets to sporting events. My Dad was always quick to praise me and tell me that I was a good boy, but now he tells me I am a good man too. It hasn't always been that way. My Dad was, and to a degree still is, a very difficult man. He doesn't like to admit mistakes and is very quick to judge others when they make mistakes. I think that this trait of his played a large part in my younger years. He would hold me responsible for everything that went on in the house. He was constantly judging me when I was a kid, and I only used to come around to him when he finally allowed me in. It wasn't until I started university that I began to see him in a different light. Nowadays when he notices a mistake that I've made he's quick to remind me of the consequences of my
